The flag of the historic frigate "Constitution," a ship manned by men who were not "too proud to fight," will be though in the labby of the state house as greatest importance to the new nation soon as an appropriate case can be prehung in the looby of the state house as soon as an appropriate case can be prepared for the famous relic. The flag which was presented to the state on July 4 last by the town of Flagstaff will be given a prominent place in the lobby according to Secretary Charles R. Osburn of the board of control.

The flag, which was flown by the "Constitution" in the battles of 1812 and other engagements of the naval war of that period, measures four by six feet. Patched in many places, it shows evidence of hard wear in the winds of the North Atlantic, when the "Constitution" was the most powerful and most feared of all the ships in the American navy. The flag carries but thirteen stars, one for each of the original states of the union.

The flag will be placed in a glast case, together with a photographic reproduction of the "Constitution" and a description of that historic vessel which is still one of the great relics at Boston navy yard. The description which has been selected for the with the flag is reprinted from ira. Hollis book "The Frigate Constitution."

Just at present the famous old flag is carefully tucked away in a silken bag in the depths of the safe in the state auditor's office.
